VisionCorps Announces New President and CEO

(Lancaster, Penna.) May 6, 2025 – Paul Trunk, chair of the VisionCorps Board of Directors, recently announced that Megan Tomscheck will be the new president and CEO of VisionCorps.

“After a search process and interviews, the Board of Directors chose Megan, an internal candidate, to be the new leader of VisionCorps. We believe her enthusiasm, experience, and passion will continue to advance the mission and goals of VisionCorps both locally and nationally,” said Trunk.

Tomscheck will begin her new role on Oct. 1. Dennis Steiner, current president and CEO, is scheduled to retire Oct. 31. Until then, said Trunk, she will be working closely with Steiner to ensure a smooth transition in leadership.

“I am extremely happy for Megan and looking forward to working closely with her over the next few months as she prepares for her new role as CEO at VisionCorps,” said Steiner. “I’ve had the opportunity to watch her grow and develop into a strong and capable leader. I am confident that VisionCorps, under her guidance and direction, will continue to be a leader in providing services to people who are blind or who have low vision.”

“Her knowledge and work experience at VisionCorps are big assets,” said Trunk.

“Megan started at VisionCorps in 2007 and after working in both marketing and development, advanced to the Senior VP/Chief Development Officer,” said Trunk. “She solicited the first $1 million gift for the agency and organized Eye Drop, our annual signature fundraiser, which is on par to surpass $1 million since its start in 2019.”

Most recently, she led the agency acquisition of Little Rock, AR facility and business lines, increasing the number of employees by 50 and anticipated revenue by 10 percent.

“I’m looking forward to continuing the important rehabilitation work provided by VisionCorps to people with vision impairments,” said Tomscheck. “We know the demand for our services is increasing as a growing number of individuals in Pennsylvania are likely to experience vision issues.”

Tomsheck said she understands the changing nature of a social service agency and has experienced it.

“When I started at VisionCorps, we were only serving and offering employment in Lancaster and Lebanon. Since then, we’ve grown to cover five counties in Pennsylvania, began a new remote Professional Services Division (PSD), and added a facility in Little Rock.

“Employment has doubled since my start and our impact has grown substantially,” said Tomsheck, who credited these accomplishments to the work of VisionCorps employees.

“Next year is our 100th anniversary and I’m very excited to build on the significant advancements we’ve made in service outreach and employment and lead this agency into the future.”
